THE GAZETTE.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, JANUARY 17.

"CAPTAIN SCOTT."-It is said of that fa-mous hunter, Captain Scott, of Kentucky, that when he sighted a coon in a tree and was re-cognized by the "critter," the sagacious coon, knowing that it was all up with him, would call out, "If that's you, Captain Scott, don't fire for I'll come down." Governor Scott, of South Carolina, as a marksman, seems to be a chip of the old block. They have recently been attempting his impeachment in the Legislature; and upon this subject in his message to the two houses he says:—"The two foremost of my accusers are well known to the criminal records of the country, and now seek under this impeachment to hide the brand of the convict." He refers to Whittemore, expelled from Congress on conviction of selling West Pont cadetships, and to Bowen, convicted of bigamy; and in each case he brings down his coon. Lastly, with such State reformers as these, we can begin to comprehend those hostile Ku-Klux-Klaus. - N. Y. Herald.

The Herald ought to be right-in fact, it ought to be sure it is right. We never before heard Capt. Scott, of "coon memory," credited to Kentucky. The famous person alluded to was an officer in the regular army, who rose from the ranks-having been commissioned for gallant services in the war of 1812. He was very illiterate, and could not write his own name, -but he could make his mark with a tachment. rifle or common smooth-bore, flint-lock musket of the olden times. Many anecdotes were told of him in the old army, where he was a universal favorite with officers and men. He had for a great many years before the Mexican war been a captain in the 5th Infantry and his company were noted as good marksmen. It was the boast of his men that their old captain could lick up a musket at any time and off-hand put a dozen bullets in the bull's-eye, one after the other, as fast as he could load and fire. -His own soldiers, who idolized him, got up the story about the coon, which is correctly told above. This brave officer was killed in the battle of Molina del Rey, where the command of the gallant Worth suffered so terribly. -Richmond Enquirer.
